David Thomas,
President

Greetings, Musik-Stadt members! As I write this, our 2025 Concours d'Musik-Stadt is six weeks away! This is always an exciting and memorable event, and I believe our location at 111 Motorcars will make it even more special. Their facility is just beautiful, not to mention the many drop-dead gorgeous cars which are stored there. I'm also excited that, for the first time, we're holding the Concours indoors! If you haven't experienced a Musik-Stadt Concours before, I especially encourage you to enter your car(s). We'll have a number of sponsors there, the same food truck as last year, and door prizes to raffle off. Our Concours Chair, Mike Moody, told me that Pirelli Tire has sent four boxes of giveaways, and Porsche of Nashville will provide two $500 gift certificates. And every participant will receive a Concours t-shirt. We have 34 entries currently, including my 911 and Cayenne Diesel, which means there is plenty of room for more friendly competition!

Our March drive through (mostly) Williamson County was fully subscribed as usual. It was a truly beautiful day, great roads, and a fine lunch at the Franklin Serrato's Steakhouse. The April Drive to Hohenwald and the Junkyard Dog is also full, which is an indicator of how much fun these drives are, so sign up promptly for future drives, as they fill up fast! We are fortunate to live in such a wonderful part of the country for beautiful driving tours.

Many of us in the club are probably wondering what effect tariffs may have on our beloved Porsche brand. Porsche, like other foreign brands with a strong export presence in markets like the United States and China, is particularly vulnerable to shifts in trade policy, which these days are coming fast and furious. Porsche's prices for the new 992.2 models are already significantly higher. A GT3 which based at around $161k a few years ago is now $222k. On Porsche's website there are only a small percentage of new 992.2 base Carreras for sale under $150,000, and the highest priced example, a base Cabriolet, is listed for $172k.

Given the effects of recent years' inflation, the product shortages of the COVID era that bid up used models, and (I believe) Porsche's understanding that the market would bear significantly higher MSRPs, can Porsche's sales, as inelastic as their demand is, hold up against the current tariffs? If they can, I believe it will be due to Porsche's strong brand loyalty and premium positioning to provide some cushion against the negative effects.

A Nice Morning Drive

April, come she will. With some great weather and fun drives I think everyone took my advice from last month and got their P-Cars out for some fun! I can tell because the newsletter is a little lite compared to the previous months. The Bavarian Bierhaus hosted it's first of the season Cars and Coffee event, which showed a good turn out. The bones (plans) of the canceled Spring Fling were retooled and used by another group in which a few members were able to participate. Food sales were robust and the craft bier line was 15 minutes deep for most of the night. A few members drove their P-cars and were rewarded by the gazes and attention of the others in attendance. And, as our president mentioned, our club drive to Williamson and Maury Counties was well attended, and our next drive was "sold out", a third driving group has been added! So get in there, quick! All thanks to our drive captain Mike Moody.

With the weather improving, more driving events and car shows are just around the corner. There's the NCM Drive for a Cure in Bowling Green, KY, the 25th annual Kars4Kids car show at Brentwood High School, and SCCA Track Nights in America at the Nashville Superspeedway! If you attend any of these events or others that I've forgotten to mention, feel free to do a little paragraph or two about your experience and drop a few pictures as well to editor2022.mskpca@gmail.com. I love showing what our members are up to!

by - sigurwhitakerbooks881@gmail.com

Gasoline Alley, famed the world over, was originally called gasoline corner because there was a corner of the paddock that distributed gasoline for the race cars. The cars were prepared for the race on the other side of the alley. In the 1920s, it became known as Gasoline Alley.

The original gasoline alley resembled a horse track paddock. A single building constructed of wood ran east to west with garages on both sides of the building. In 1929, a second bank of garages was built parallel to the first building. They were identified as the 'south bank' of garages and the original group of garages were the 'north bank'. The old garages had green and white barn doors.

In the 1930s, drivers, and crews frequently hung out at Tom Beall's Diner in the southwest corner of Gasoline Alley. Many diners rang up a tab with a promise to pay from their winnings in the Indianapolis 500.

On race day 1941, a fire swept through the south bank of garages. It started when the gasoline fell on the floor and the fumes were ignited by some welding being done in a nearby garage. While all but one of the racers were saved from the flames, the south bank of garages were destroyed. Plans were drafted in July 1941 to rebuild the garage area. They were rebuilt in the summer in preparation for the 1942 race.

In June 1985, the old garages were torn down, and by May 1986, a new modern facility with 96 garages was erected. Joe Cloutier, president of IMS, broke ground. The new garages, including the cost of tearing down the old, cost more than $4 million. The old Gasoline Alley was spread out over two acres while the new one was about the area of five football fields. The old garages were large enough for only a race car, tool chest and a small crew. The new garages had roll-up steel doors, number-punch combination-lock, and large work areas. Instead of having two east-west rows with three aisles, they were replaced by one long east-west accessory plaza and five unattached north-south fingers sprawling to the south. The new garages measured 20x25 feet—about 30% greater footage than the old garages.

In 2005, the IMS Museum recreated a mock garage stall. Before the museum closed for renovations, it usually had a 1950s or 1960s racer inside.

Stuttgart Market Letter

by David K. Whitlock

After last year's scheduling conflict, which saw the newly formed Moda Miami event competing against Amelia Island during the same weekend, this year's events were strategically split across two back-to-back weekends. RM Sotheby's kicked things off during Moda Miami on February 27 & 28, followed by Gooding & Company's Amelia Island auction on March 6 & 7, and Broad Arrow Auctions on March 7 & 8. This revised schedule gave each auction its own spotlight, resulting in 78 Porsches crossing the block with a sell-through rate of 85% and a total dollar volume of $35,886,680. With this new format proving successful, it's safe to say that Florida Car Week has officially arrived.

The most surprising sale of the week wasn't the RUF CTR, though it certainly grabbed headlines (more on that below). Instead, it was the 1964 Porsche 904 GTS that stole the show for me. If you've been following my column, you'll know that $1M+ race cars from the '50s and '60s have been struggling for years, with a steady stream of no-sales and bids well below estimates. But this time was different. Estimated between $1.5M and $1.8M, the 904 GTS blew past its high estimate, selling for $2,205,000 including buyer's premium. While one sale doesn't make a market, it was refreshing to see a classic Porsche race car finally bring strong money.

RUF collectors had a once-in-a-lifetime opportunity at Florida Car Week, with a CTR3, CTR2, and an original CTR 'Yellowbird' all on offer. RM Sotheby's sold a 2009 CTR3, one of just 31 built, for $1,116,000, while Gooding & Co. auctioned a rare Adriatic Blue CTR2, one of only 18 produced, for an impressive $2,645,000. But the star of the show was the original W09-VIN CTR 'Yellowbird', one of only 29 built and likely the lowest-mileage example in existence. Finished in RUF's iconic Blossom Yellow, it carried an estimate of "in excess of $6M" and sold for $6,055,000 including buyer's premium. With these results, RUF has firmly cemented itself as a seven-figure brand, right alongside Porsche's most valuable models.

The 356 market also showed surprising strength, with an 89% sell-through rate across 19 cars—a sharp contrast to the recently lower sell-through rates for the model. While many sales landed just below their estimates, there were a few standout results. A 1952 356 1500 Super Coupe brought $235,200, well above recent comps, where similar examples have struggled to break $200,000.

Carrera-engined cars also performed well, with a 1959 356A 1600 GS/GT Carrera Speedster selling for $973,000, reinforcing its position as one of the most sought-after 356 variants.

While 993s have been among the auction market's strongest performers in recent years, Florida Car Week delivered underwhelming results for the model—with one notable exception.

Leading the pack was a 1997 911 Turbo S, which sold within its estimate range at $643,000—a solid, if unsurprising, result for one of the most coveted air-cooled Turbo models. Beyond that, however, the standard 993 Turbo results were all over the place. Of the three standard Turbos on offer, one failed to sell at $260,000, while another sold well below estimates at $268,800.

But then there was the outlier—an Arena Red 993 Turbo that crushed expectations, selling for $260,400 against a $200,000–$225,000 estimate. If there's one lesson to be learned here, it's that you should never bet against Arena Red when it comes to 993s. This signature color, made famous in Porsche's original 993 Turbo "Kills bugs fast" ad campaign, continues to prove that the right spec can still defy estimates.

With a strong sell-through rate, standout RUF results, and a rare success story for vintage Porsche race cars, Florida Car Week made a strong debut as a new fixture on the Porsche auction calendar. With Paris Retromobile behind us and Monterey still months away, all eyes will be on how the market shapes up heading into spring. One thing's for sure—if this year's Florida auctions are any indication, 2025 is going to be an interesting one.
