Greetings, Musik-Stadt members!

Hoping you are signing up for the Musik-Stadt Oktoberfest on Saturday, September 26th, also to be held for the second year at 111 Motorcars. Activities chair Valerie Gillespie and her team will no doubt create another marvelous and memorable event!

Also, there is still time to sign up for the August 20th Riverboat Dinner Cruise which our At-Large board member Norm Follis has created for our enjoyment!

It's always fun to run into other Porsche owners enjoying their vehicles, and the latest occurrence of this for Janet and me was during our July vacation at Lake Michigan. We met three couples from the Chicago area in their 911s who were staying at our resort. They were on their way south after touring the western shore towns as well as Mackinac Island.

As usual with Porsche owners I run into, they were very nice people, just as our club slogan says, "It's not just the cars, it's the people!" One of the guys had recently retired and started an online clothing and accessories store known as The Frunk Club! Be safe out there!

A Nice Morning's Drive

SG Newsletter

This weekend I changed the oil in my Hyundai Sonata. While the Hyundai Sonata isn't a Porsche product (far from it) the experience between changing oil on a 2023 Hyundai Sonata and a 2023 Porsche 911 couldn't be more different if it could. At heart of the matter is that Porsche, since 2012 with the introduction of the 991, has made changing the oil almost something that has to be done at the dealership (or specialized 3rd party shop) at a significant price. While dealership service prices are high, they employ technicians that are highly trained and skilled in their field. The money that you spend at a dealership or specialized shop goes toward continual training and expertise of the technicians they employ. The following op-ed should not be considered an indictment against those professionals that work hard in conditions that can, plainly, suck.

Changing oil, however, should not require any specialized skills. That said, my wife (and co-editor) and I no longer patronize more than one place for oil changes because they couldn't change the oil on my wife's Volkswagen Jetta correctly. It's amazing to me that removing a drain plug and filter, then replacing them and filling the engine with the correct viscosity and amount of oil was a specialized skill. Go figure!

Changing the oil on my 997 requires no special skills. It could practically be done at an "Instant Oil Change" chain. It is almost as simple as changing the oil on my 1974 Super Beetle, if not a little easier.

Finding solutions to stripping the threads in the magnesium block that are needed to tighten the oil strainer plate and “messaging” the JC Whitney oil strainer’s opening to fit over the drain tube, sadly, requires problem solving skill sets not often found in today’s world, much less at 17 year’s of age.

But how do you keep your customer from going to “Jiffy Oil in 5 Minutes” for half the cost you’re charging? Why easy, you put a plastic tray over the opening to the top of the engine (and put the luftfilter behind the bumper cap)! That plastic tray (and a couple of fans) is enough to get most people to not even think of changing the oil themselves! It’s a move that Porsche and other manufacturers have increasingly doing to keep owners coming back to their service bays.

By way of comparison to a 991 or 992, my Sonata is similar to my 997 (and other 911s that came before). I open the hood and the top of the engine, including the oil fill, are front and center. No need to even remove a plastic tray. The drain plug and filter were accessible underneath. I will say that in the age of maximizing fuel economy and reducing drag, many cars now have a under tray that provides a (relatively) smooth underside to facilitate moving the air underneath the car in a streamlined manner. Often, you have to entirely remove this tray to access the underneath of the engine where the drain plug and oil filter can be accessed. But not for my Sonata! While other manufacturers want to make it harder to do something as simple as an oil change, Hyundai wants to make it simpler: they’ve included doors in the under tray under the drain plug and filter to allow quick and easy access to what you need! The only thing that would be easier would be not to have an under tray at all, like my 997 or Super Beetle.

October 10 Drive to Fort Donelson Civil War Battlefield & National Cemetery & Lunch in Dover, TN

Drive Captain
Mike Moody,

Join us for another scenic drive through the backwoods of middle TN to arrive in Dover TN, and tour the historical Fort Donelson National Cemetery, Dover Hotel where Gen Buckner surrendered to Gen Grant to end the siege, and National Battlefield that overlooks the Cumberland River. Lots of history up there and the view from Fort Donelson of the Cumberland River is not to be missed. We saw a pair of bald eagles last trip so don't miss out. Options for lunch include the Dover Grille, where we will stop first. If it fills up, you are welcome to continue driving south (to the left) on Donelson Pkwy to Mama Mea's just a short distance and eat there, or you can pack a picnic lunch and continue down Donelson Pkwy until you come to Fort Donelson and drive back to the picnic area. After lunch, we will drive to Fort Donelson and in the rear turn left to park in the circle visitor area and hopefully take a group photo overlooking the Cumberland River. Registration opens Oct 1 for everyone but first time drives members, who can register 1 week earlier. Please email drives.mskpca@gmail.com for reservations. Tour starts from McKay's Books, 636 Old Hickory Blvd, Nashville so arrive by 9am for safety briefing and directions with departure at 9:15 and 9:30am. Park in the far back away from their building. There will be a restroom stop.

Stuttgart Market Letter

by David K. Whitlock

July marked the second month in a row that our sell-through rate fell year over year, although the decline was slight, with 73% of the 753 Porsches on offer finding new homes compared to 74% of 634 cars last July. But that one-point drop tells only part of the story, as unit volume jumped 19% and dollar volume surged 57% to $59,992,378. The results were essentially flat compared to June, which saw the same 73% sell-through rate and $60,739,655 from 746 cars, especially notable given that July's auction calendar consisted almost entirely of online sales. Mecum Harrisburg was the month's only in-person auction, and even that featured just a handful of Porsches. In fact, one weekend saw only two Porsches cross the block, making July's nearly $60m total all the more impressive.

Leading the pack in July was our only supercar to cross the block, a 2004 Carrera GT finished in Fayence Yellow. One of approximately 44 examples produced in the color for the

North American market, the car showed 9,000 miles and was a very nice example, complete with its fitted luggage and documentation that the latest recall campaign was addressed in 2024. It sold on Bring a Trailer for an impressive $4,568,000, proving that big money for Carrera GTs isn't reserved solely for the legacy auction houses.

Over the past few months, the 992.2 market has struggled, with most models posting sell-through rates below 50% and some models failing to sell a car at all. But 992.2 GT3s appear to have found their footing, as both winged examples on offer sold along with two of the three GT3 Tourings. The four cars that found new homes traded in the $316,000-$325,000 range, while the lone no-sale was the only Paint-to-Sample example, a Meissen Blue GT3 Touring that failed to sell at a final bid of $343,000. The bigger news, though, was the arrival of our first 992.2 Turbo S: a 2026 Coupe finished in Slate Grey Neo over Black with 671 miles and a $310,000 sticker price.

Unfortunately, it went the way of many early 992.2s, failing to sell at a final bid of $338,000.

On the 991 front, GT2 RSs continued to impress, with every example besting its high estimate and one setting a new all-time record. Over the past three months, the model's average sale price has increased by $93,945, while the low and high ends of the market have climbed by $59,500 and $266,580, respectively. That new high came courtesy of a 2018 GT2 RS finished in Viola Purple Metallic with just 593 miles and a strong options list that included the Weissach Package, Sport Chrono Package, and carbon-fiber bucket seats. Sales in the $600,000-$700,000 range have become commonplace, but those cars were mostly finished in the usual White, Black, Grey, and Red. The combination of rare color and exceptionally low mileage pushed this one to $1,000,000, making it the first GT2 RS to reach the seven-figure mark.

Another market gaining traction is the 981 Boxster Spyder, with its average sale price increasing by $15,581 over the past three months while the low and high ends of the market climbed by $6,005 and $18,981, respectively. Although only one example crossed the block in July, it was a significant sale. The 2016 Boxster Spyder was finished in White over Garnet Red leather and Black Alcantara and showed 25,000 miles. Had this car come to market a year ago, it likely would have been an $85,000 car. Instead, it sold for $106,500, further demonstrating the growing strength of the 981 Spyder market.

Moving from one limited-production, mid-engine Porsche to another, the 1974 914 LE 2.0 also produced some impressive results in July. Porsche built just 1,000 examples for North America, split evenly between two distinctive colorways: 500 Ivory White and Phoenix Red “Creamsicles” and 500 Black and Sunflower Yellow “Bumblebees.” The last LE we saw sell was a Bumblebee that brought $31,000 in August 2025, but July gave us two prime examples. First was a 57,000-mile Creamsicle with a multi-year restoration completed in 2023 that sold for $71,000. It was followed by a Bumblebee restored by Gaudin Porsche of Las Vegas for the 2022 Porsche Classic Restoration Challenge. Showing just 45 miles since completion, it hammered for $91,000. Those prices represent a huge jump for the model, but both cars were excellent recent restorations, and, interestingly enough, both went to the same winning bidder.

Taking a look at the classic 911 market, July brought the rare

opportunity to see two 1973 Carrera RS 2.7 Lightweights cross the block. Of the 1,580 Carrera RS 2.7s produced, only 200 were built in lightweight Sport specification, making it remarkable that two appeared in the same month. The first was finished in Blood Orange with Black side graphics and had been restored between 2017 and 2020 by marque expert Early 911S of Wuppertal, Germany. Formerly part of the Dana Mecum Collection before being purchased by the seller in 2025, it was an excellent, well-documented example that brought $1,200,000. The second Lightweight sat at the opposite end of the spectrum. Although refinished in its original shade of Gulf Blue, it had lived the hard life typical of many competition cars from the era, with much of its body replaced following a major accident. That history kept bidders at bay, and it failed to sell at a final bid of $575,269. The 356 market continued to seesaw between flat and soft throughout July, although the month's highlight was a very nice 1958 356A Speedster. Refurbished over 40 months after spending decades disassembled and in storage, it went on to earn a host of post-restoration awards, including Best Porsche at the 2017 Hilton Head Island Concours d'Elegance, Best in Class at the 2018 Concours d'Elegance of Texas, and a Podium Award at the 2025 La Jolla Concours d'Elegance. Finished in Silver Metallic over Red leather and riding on 15-inch Rudge knock-off wheels, it was everything you'd want in a Speedster. The market for this one proved flat, though, as it sold for $400,000, the exact same price it brought last September. Overall, July was largely a repeat of what we saw in June, with the sell-through rate coming in slightly below the previous year despite big gains in both dollar volume and unit volume. Now, all eyes turn to Monterey, where 87 Porsches and six RUFs are set to cross the block in August. I expect the momentum behind supercars and modern classics to continue, but Monterey should also give us a good look at the vintage Porsche race car market, with two very nice 550s, a 907 Langheck, and several other significant competition cars on offer. Until next month.
